After finishing his education at White Hall Academy, Cumberland township, he bega nlife as a farmer but soon left the farm to follow teaching, taking a school near York Springs and for eight years was principal of the York Springs High School. THE TELEPHONE PROSPERITY

NUMBER OF 'PHONES ARE A THIRD MORE THAN LAST YEAR

Two Farmer Lines Have Added Over Thirty New 'Phones.

The prosperity of this community appears in many other ways than noted in our last issue—the enormous increase in the freight business of the two railways—and one of these ways is the great increase in the number of those who use telephones. In days of stringency there might be many who would hesitate over the installing of a telephone, but when prosperity smiles the telephone becomes a necessity and once installed remains as a necessity.

The local telephone company was built twelve years ago by a number of our enterprising citizens and after several years was sold to the United Telephone and Telegraph Company. One years ago, or after eleven years of existence the United Company had 176 phones in use, but in the past year 109 new phones have been installed so that to-day one who has the United Service has a choice of 285 calls that can be rung up from the central office of Gettysburg. The larger part of this increase have been individuals who have felt the need of a phone and at length in these prosperous days installed the same. Every phone added increases the value of the service to the patrons.

About thirty of the new phones were added by reason of two farmer lines that were recently built and they are called from Gettysburg Central. The keyboard has become so large as to be a tax to a single operator. In the past year the keyboard was enlarged and rearranged for the operators. Mrs. Leah Snitzer is chief of the staff of operators composed of Miss Lou Wills, Miss Grace Troxel, with Miss Mable Grenoble as night operator and Miss Louise Stahle as substitute. They so excell in courtesy that whenever the service has not been what it might be through no fault of theirs one did not know how to put a kick to them.

The farmer lines are two, and were built by independent companies. The Barlow Telephone Company, of which Franklin S. Cromer is president, built the Barlow line, owning the poles, wires and phones and pay a small yearly amount for the central privilege. E. H. Plank is president of the Marsh Creek Company. This line is made up of three circuits reaching twenty-one farms. The Barlow line reaches eight farmers. The phones installed since the last directory was issued are so numerous that in calling Central it is important to give the number wanted, and by order of the company, the operator does not say "hello" these days but "number" and it is absolutely necessary to give the numbers and final letter when calling the farmers' lines; and the following list will be of service in using same:

Barlow Line.—Rider, J. F., 151 E; Harry Black 151 L; Lott Bros., 151 H; A. S. Mills, 151 R; F. S. Cromer, 151 J; Wm. Durborow 151 N; Mt. Joy Parsonage, 151 U; H. S. Cromer, 151 P.

Marsh Creek Line.—Harvey D. Bream, 188 E; Robt. S. Bream, 188 L; George Wible, 188 H; Harvey Scott, 188 R; Edw. A. Scott, 188J; McPherson Farm, 188 U; J. Luther Scott, 189 E; W. W. Scott, 189 L; Chas. Weikert, 189 H; Jas. L. Bigham, 189 R; W. A. Bigham, 189 J; Gettysburg Water Works, 189 U; Wm. Bigham Sons, 189 N; Chas. Rohrbaugh, 190 E; Fred Riley, 190 L; Robt. A. Harner, 190 H; H. P. Bigham, 190 R; Mrs. Weikert's Store, 190 J; J. P. Bigham, 190 N; Edward Weikert, 190 U; E. H. Plank, 190 G.

No directory of the United Telephone has been issued since 1904 but the company is at work now on a new directory and it is expected to have the same in the hands of all patrons in about a month.

Division Supt. Hart is in town this week supervising the erection of two public booths the first the United Company have had in this place, one is being placed in Eagle Hotel and the other in Hotel Gettysburg.

ANDREW J. KOSER INJURED

Knocked Down and Run Over by Reckless Drivers.

A horrible accident occurred in Biglerville on last Saturday evening. The Biglerville Band was holding a festival and that town was crowded with people. Several young men began racing on the streets of the town and the reckless driving attracted such attention that they were warned by the authorities to stop. But they paid no attention to warnings.

At about half past eight they drove out the street across the railroad, past the Bigham Hardware Store. Andrew J. Koser was in front of the store and called to the young men to stop racing. They drove on a short distance and turning came back at a headlong gait.

Mr. Koser stepped out on the road and motioned to the young men to stop. They paid no attention to him but came on and he was struck by one of the teams and hurled to the ground with great force. The reckless drivers paid no attention to their awful work, made no attempt to stop their teams [illegible] on passing over the body.

Mr. Koser fell on his head on a stone with such force that the skull was crushed at a point on front part of his head. He had a number of other bruises on his body. Drs. Dalbey and Stewart of this place were immediately sent for and found his condition to be such that very little hope is entertained. He has been in an unconscious condition since the accident. An additional sadness is added to the awful accident in that Sunday was the anniversary of his 66th birthday.

The people of Biglerville, as well as everyone else who have heard of the accident are indignant over the reckless fast driving of the young men responsible for the accident. While we have been unable to secure their names the impression prevails that their identity is known, and that steps will be taken to punish them.

The work of recording them is expected to last at least three weeks, as the two documents make one hundred and fifty printed pages.

The larger mortgage is held by the Mercantile Trust Company of New York City, while the ten million dollar mortgage is held by the Bowling Green Trust Company of New York. Both are for the same purpose—to secure the issue of 4 per cent. 50-year bonds

Merchants' Meet.

The Retail Merchants' Association held their regular meeting on last Friday evening. Assistant Secretary Kieffer reported a partial canvas of the town and that he had met with encouragement from all the merchants approached, that none had refused to join. He reported a membership of thirty-six with initiation fee paid.

The question of closing the grocery stores every evening except Saturday, at six o'clock until Oct 1, was considered and upon vote carried by a large majority. This is in line with the action of dry goods gents' furnishing and other stores now observed. But few stores will be open after 6 o'clock in this town, only drug stores and fruit stores. Some of the butchers desire to have a general closing of the meat stores but it is doubtful whether this will be accomplished.

The State Convention of the Retail Merchants' Association will meet in August and the matter of election of delegates being taken up, E. P. Miller President of the Association, was unanimously chosen delegate and W. Lavere Hafer, alternate.

The matter of regulating outsiders who come to Gettysburg and engaging in a peddling business was considered at some length and it was the unanimous sentiment of the merchants of this place. It was concluded that it would be best to ascertain what ordinances were in force on the subject and after determining exactly what should be done to present the matter to the Town Council and urged action on their part.

On motion a legislative committee was authorized to be composed of three members to be appointed by the president. Later in Week President Miller announced the appointment of H. T. Weaver, H. B. Bender and Wm. Arch. McClean.

Peculiar Accidents.

Leila Guise, nine year old daughter of John A. Guise, of Huntington township, stood away a fish gig and the prongs dislodged a scythe which was hanging on an apple limb overhead. The sharp blade crashed down on the child's shoulder cutting a deep gash about three and a half inches long. Fortunately the bone was not injured and the wound is healing nicely.

Curvin Bixler, employed on a farm near McSherrystown, rode a horse to Hanover last week. The horse slipped and fell on the young man in the Centre Square. He escaped with a severely bruised left foot, but no bones broken.

Paul Zepp residing on the Starry farm near York Springs, while fixing something at the binder the lead horse strayed over in the grain and he went to chastise the animal, striking it a couple times with a stick, and a piece about the thickness of a lead pencil and about five inches long broke off and struck him in the groin, penetrating to the depth of a couple of inches.

C. W. Hershey, of Union township, while threshing oats last Friday, had an eye injured by a stone which flew from the cylinder of the separator, and cut the ball of one of his eyes. While Mr. Hershey's eye is badly injured, there is hope that the sight of the member may be saved.

FORECLOSURE PROCEEDINGS

GETTYSBURG TRANSIT COMPANY TO BE SOLD

A Checkered Career—Would Be A Valuable Adjunct to any Trolley Built To This Place.

Papers were presented to Judge S. McC. Swope last week for the foreclosure of the mortgage on the Gettysburg Transit Company. The West End Trust Company of Philadelphia, the trustee named in mortgage was the petitioner for decree of foreclosure and direction to sell the property. The trustee company presented the petition by reason of the fact that the Central Trust Company the present holder of the majority of the bonds secured by said mortgage had notified the trustee to proceed with foreclosure proceedings. Hon Robert Snodgrass of Harrisburg, and Wm. and Wm. Arch McClean were the attorneys presenting the papers to the Court.

This railway has had a checkered career. The first company was organized in 1891 by E. M. Hoffer and road was built in 1893 and a mortgage put on the property for $200,000. Mr. Hoffer was caught in the slump of 1893 and was unable to market the bonds and things went from bad to worse until the property was sold in 1897 under foreclosure proceedings. The property was bought by a number of business men of Philadelphia who were close to the West End Trust Company of that City. They reorganized the company as The Gettysburg Transit Company in 1898 with a capital of $100,000 and placed a mortgage of $100,000 on the property securing bonds of an equal amounting, carrying coupons maturing January and July of each year.

About six years ago the holders of the bonds and stock sold their holding to C. Taylor Leland and other moneyed men of Philadelphia, who have run the plant since that time and who buying the Light Company at the same time have built it up into a prosperous company, furnishing electric light to the borough and many citizens and doing a business outclassing in every way that done by the previous company. While the Light Company was a paying one, the Transit Company has been one long struggle, in which much litigation has been mixed. There have been no coupons paid on the bonds since they were issued in 1898 and the condition of the company resulted in the appointment of of C. Taylor Leland as Receiver in April 1908.

It is to be hoped that this property when sold sometime in September will fall into fortunate hands who will be able to make it a prosperous paying concern. This property can not help but be a valuable adjunct to the first trolley that will be built to Gettysburg, and those who have been interested in these trolley building plans should be among the bidders at the sale of the road.

A Method of Eradicating the Wild Onion.

The Office of Farm Management, United States Department of Agriculture, has now ready for distribution a circular giving a detailed discussion of the wild onion problem and outlining a plan whereby the pest can be exterminated. This circular will be sent free to any person requesting it.

Lighting the Town

Work has started on the erection of poles, and stringing of wires by the Keystone Electric Light Co., to light the town according to recent contract made with the borough.

The Light Committee plotted the town and 35 Arc lamps as used at present will be placed according to the new arrangement, and 47 Tungsten lamps. This plotting of the town was afterwards approved by the Town Council, and work will be pushed rapidly, and it is believed that when the new lighting of the town begins that Gettysburg will be better lighted than under the present excellent plan.

Mr. Keister of Hanover, with a gang of five men are at work placing the poles, and over 70 poles will be erected. Some of these will take the place of those now standing that are deemed unsafe. At such points the new pole is placed alongside of the old pole, and when the wiring begins, and the brackets and wire have been transferred to the new pole, the old pole will be cut down. A number of new poles will be erected at a number of points to carry the wires for the Tungsten lamps. These lamps have been ordered and will be the best on market with reflector, and it is expected will give a most satisfactory service Several miles of wire have been ceived with other supplies, and work will be rapidly pushed pletion by T. P. Turner Manager of the Light Co

The Biglerville Na pay at the rate of on money left w or longer.

A WALK IN THE MORNING

WITH THE MESSAGE OF THE FRESHNESS OF A NEW DAY.

The Inspiration of Out-of-Doors in the Morning. Gettysburg Offers a Variety of Ideal Walks.

A walk in the morning is an inspiration. It may be a walk to your work for the day, or a walk to get back to your work, or a walk to some unfinished task in a field, or a walk taking the cows to a pasture lot. The kinds of walk may be as individualistic as the one taking them. No matter what kind of a walk, it is an inspiration in the morning. If it isn't that something is out of gear with the individual.

The best exercise in the world is walking, it is not only the best but the ideal exercise the one for which the human has been planned and which don't require costly appliances, apparatuses and toggery. But maybe that's the reason why it is overlooked, it is so commonplace because there is nothing to do with the legs but walk them. But there is no better time to take them walking than in the morning. They react on the one to whom they belong, bringing a message of the morning happily mingled with the natural exercise of the body.

In the morning the earth and sky are fresh. Some mornings look as though they had been washed clean and hung out to dry, and the mornings are to be found in many moods, well as many as the human and fitting right in with his cosmos as though specially made for him. Mortal is alert and wideawake in the morning and peculiarly responds to the freshness of the new day. He catches the message of freshness that lingers when the fatigue, heat and drag of the day has arrived.

It is easy to walk in the morning. No coaxing is needed. There is no hesitation over distances, you want to go to get what there is in it and you reel off more miles than you would at any other time in the day and there is less fatigue. The effort has cost less and all day long the compensations make good.

Gettysburg and surrounding country was specially designed for the high private in the rear ranks who goes it on foot. Four or five squares in almost any direction will place him beyond the contact touch of houses and carry him into the open country. He scarcely needs to choose, he can go by well built avenues, or country roads newly macadamized, or by some lane or path. In a quarter of an hour he can be out of sight of the built up lanes and be where it is all out-of-doors, and feast on beautiful landscapes, distant mountains, always majestic grand, thrilling.

A walk out Long Lane to the southwest has its own meaning. One is quickly beyond the built up portions. Soon the last habitations are passed. What a contrast they present. The many huts or cabins have disappeared, but four remaining, delapidated in the midst of natural beauty. The lane possesses a novelty unlike other well traveled roads. They go somewhere, the lane goes nowhere, just goes to pieces in fields. You travel along it to no certain point. You arrive where it no longer exists and must choose. You may go on a route of your own through weeds, over fields, along and over fences. You have willed this day not to follow but to wonder whether impulse directs. Or on another morning you may follow a tiny trail through high weeds that other humans have made. It is the path that has been trodden and speaks the fascination of human association.

You have left houses behind minutes ago. you are in the big out-of-doors but you are not alone. Some passing acquaintance may insist upon telling you "all alone," but you are not and have'nt been. The friends of out-of-doors the cheerful birds have waylaid your path. The meadow larks on either side have thrilled you the top of the morning and you have'nt known how to answer back. A song sparrow has punctuated the morning awakening with the sweetness of song or a dove has cooed a message. Birds, and green of grass, gold of sunlight, blue of dome all tell you their story of beautiful out-of-doors, and into their story comes the puff of engine, grind of turning wheels and back there is your world and your brother.

How the deep shade of a wooded spot invites. The dark green and shadows line. The moving rustle overhead hums a last lullaby of the night. Steps grow slower, the brakes are put on and one stops almost unconsciously, to commune as it were for a moment over the beauty of the morning.

The mornings in the changing seasons have their own messages. Just now the golden spots tell where rich fields of grain have been garnered. Fields a short time ago a wilderness of growth, or maturing harvest have been reaped and the earth has taken on an aspect of being cleaned up, except where the tall green of shooting corn bespeak a further harvest. In these mornings the sun, air and sky seem to sing of the glory of gathered harvests.

The passing fancies of the morning walk may be interspersed pleasantly with the human, some farmer on his way to the milk station, or out doing the first chores of the morning, or on the return trip to town it may be your friend the milk man who greets you and tells you "you are out early" or "out walking." Of course you are neither on a bicycle or on horse back or in your friend's auto but you have no desire to be funny by saying any of these things. The cheer of the greeting of the new day is uppermost and you listen with interest as your friend the milkman tells with a pride that being out early is a prerogature of the farmer.

He says some people think the farmer don't get much sleep but he gets as much as any body else. He goes to bed not later than nine o'clock, often an hour earlier and he's up at four o'clock with seven to eight good hours of sleep to his credit.

The farmer may not get up for the inspiration of the morning, but he gets it all the same for it is possible for him to do as much work in an hour in the morning as he will do in two hours when the drag of the day is on. He gets up to get this period of easy working so that he can get his work done.

The milkman friend finally expresses his belief in conclusion that the town people could do better work if they reversed the usual order of things, cut out the late hours, go to bed and in the freshness of dawn devote themselves to the unfinished tasks and I'm not prepared to dispute this conviction of the milkman.

With the morning walk about Gettysburg comes the reflection. Why don't people of means living elsewhere come to Gettysburg and build homes in our beautiful superbs and enjoy the exquisite out-of-door to be found here, where the walking is always good, the riding ideal and the automobling perfect. The first thing the stranger usually does is to wildly enthuse over our good roads, but why don't more of them move here. Seems to me if I did'nt live here I would never be contented until I called Gettysburg my home.

Oh, yes talking about the inspiration of a walk in the morning—another reflection—Why don't more of us who happen to be living right here in Gettysburg get out in the morning and claim our own heritage.

GETTYSBURG JULY 3, 1863.

BY GUY WETMORE CARRYL.

(Copyright 1909 by Harper & Brothers)

Though the winds be strong that lash
along the steeds of the charging
sea,
With lunge and urge of assaulting
surge still seeking a further goal,
God in His pleasure hath set a measure, the bound of their boast to be,
Where, pile upon pile, and mile on
mile, are the cliffs of calm control.
But the Lord of Hosts who guardeth
the coasts yet loveth each sieging
swell,
And He who is Brother to surge and
smother is Brother to cliff as well:
He giveth the word if the shore be stirred, He biddeth the sea subside,
And this is our trust, that His will is
just, however He turn the tide!

As night went gray at the touch of day
and the slow dawn mounted higher
On the Federal right the third day's fight was born in a sheet of fire:
Gun upon gun to the front was run,
and each in its turn spoke forth
From fevered mouth to the waiting
South the word of the watching
North.
And the wraith of Death with withering breath o'er the wide arena played,
As across the large swept on the charge of the old Stonewall brigade.
But the first great wave on a sudden gave, retreating across the slain, Gave and broke, as the rifles spoke from the long blue line of Kane!

Then silence sank on the double rank deployed on the sullen hill.
And, across the plain of the early slain
the hosts of the South were still,
Waiting, each, till further speech from the guns should dart and din,
Sign to the brave that the final wave of the tide was rolling in!
Down the line like a draught of wine
the presence of Hancock came,
And eyes grew bright in the steadfast light of his own that blazed to flame,
For the Federals knew, where his banner blue and they saw their leader ride,
That a righteous God on that sea of sod had decreed the turn of tide!

So came one, when a signal gun awoke
on the Southern side,
And Hunt's brigade with a cannonade
to the challenge of Lee replied.
Like arrows sent from a bow well
bent to the heart of a distant targe, Virginia's hope rode down the slope,
with Pickett leading the charge!
Steady and slow, as soldiers go in some serried dress parade,
With flags a-dance in their cool advance came the gallant gray brigade.
And steady and slow, as if no foe on the frowning heights abode,
To the cannon's breath, to the scythe
of Death, Pickett, their leader, rode.

God! what a mile he led them! From the slope they sought to scale,
Sullen and hot, the swingeing shot
was hurling its awful hail:
Where a long ravine ploughed through the green they halted, anew to form,
And then with a cheer to the ridge's sheer they swept like a summer storm.
Hand to hand at the guns they manned, the Federals fought and fell Where Armistead his regiment up the canister-harrowed swell.
He touched a gun for a breath he w[illegible]
the [illegible] of the [illegible] pride,
Then over the hill Jehovah's will decreed the turn of the tide!

Taken in flank each gallant rank of Pickett's battalions gave,
Trampled and tossed, since hope was lost, there was left but life to save Beaten back on the travelled track they shuddered, and broke, and fled.
And, swinging his scythe, Death claimed his tithe in the pale and patient dead!
For the arm of the Lord had raised the sword that man may not gainsay,
'Twixt the cause of the Free and the cause of Lee the issue no longer lay.
For the word of the Lord had gone abroad that the strife of the right
had won,
And Freedom's foe at the rail bowed low and answered "Thy will be done!"

Pickett, ah, Pickett, the stanchest heart in the Southern host that day.
Hail to the brave in the last great wave
of the long and fearful fray,
That broke in foam on the trampled loam of that tempest-trampled mound.
In the glory born of a hope forlorn
they passed to their last account!
Meade ah Meade, there are hearts that bleed for your men that fought and fell
When the final charge broke on the marge of a hillside turned to Hell.
But this the speech on the craggy beach that the sea proclaims for aye.
And this the word that the cliffs unstirred through the ages still reply:—

Though the winds be strong that lash
along the steeds of the charging
sea.
With lunge and urge of assaulting
surge yet seeking a further goal,
God in His pleasure hath set a measure, the bound of their boast to be,
Where, pile upon pile, and mile on
mile, are the cliffs of calm control.
But the Lord of Hosts who guardeth
the coasts yet loveth each sieging
swell,
And He who is Brother to surge and
smother is Brother to cliff as well:
He giveth the word if the shore be

And this is our trust, that His will is
just, however He turn the tide!

Farmers Fear Moth Pest.

Alarmed by the invasion of the gypsy and brown-tail moths into New York state from New England, where their ravages have cost the people many millions of dollars, thousands of leaders among the agricultural communities of every section of the country are today joining a movement to ward off this crop plague by protecting the birds that serve as its greatest check. Acting upon this emergency demand from the farming interests, the National Association of Audubon Societies has established a national information bureau at 141 Broadway New York City from which information and instructions for preserving and increasing the numbers of the insect-eating birds are being distributed throughout the country. If every American who is interested in the crop wealth of the land will join this campaign of practical education at once, it is declared by etomological experts here, there may yet be some hope of averting the moth plague which now threatens to sweep the continent.

Three main lines of work have been projected today by the leaders in this movement on behalf of the country's agricultural interests. Sentiment in favor of the protection of birds is to be crystallized, comprehensive and dras-

Profit by a Gettysburg citizen's experience.

Miss K. Crouse, 130 West St., Gettysburg, Pa., says: "I suffered from kidney disease for years and was unable to find anything that would give me even temporary relief. I endured a great deal of misery from pains in the small of my back and I was also greatly trouble with headaches and dizzy spells. My kidneys gave me much trouble and the complaint was growing worse daily. When a friend advised me to try Doan's Kidney Pills I procured a box at the Peoples Drug Store and they proved to be just what I required. They went at once to the seat of the trouble and gave me immediate relief. I am now in better health than before in years and it is all due to the curative powers of Doan's Kidney Pills."

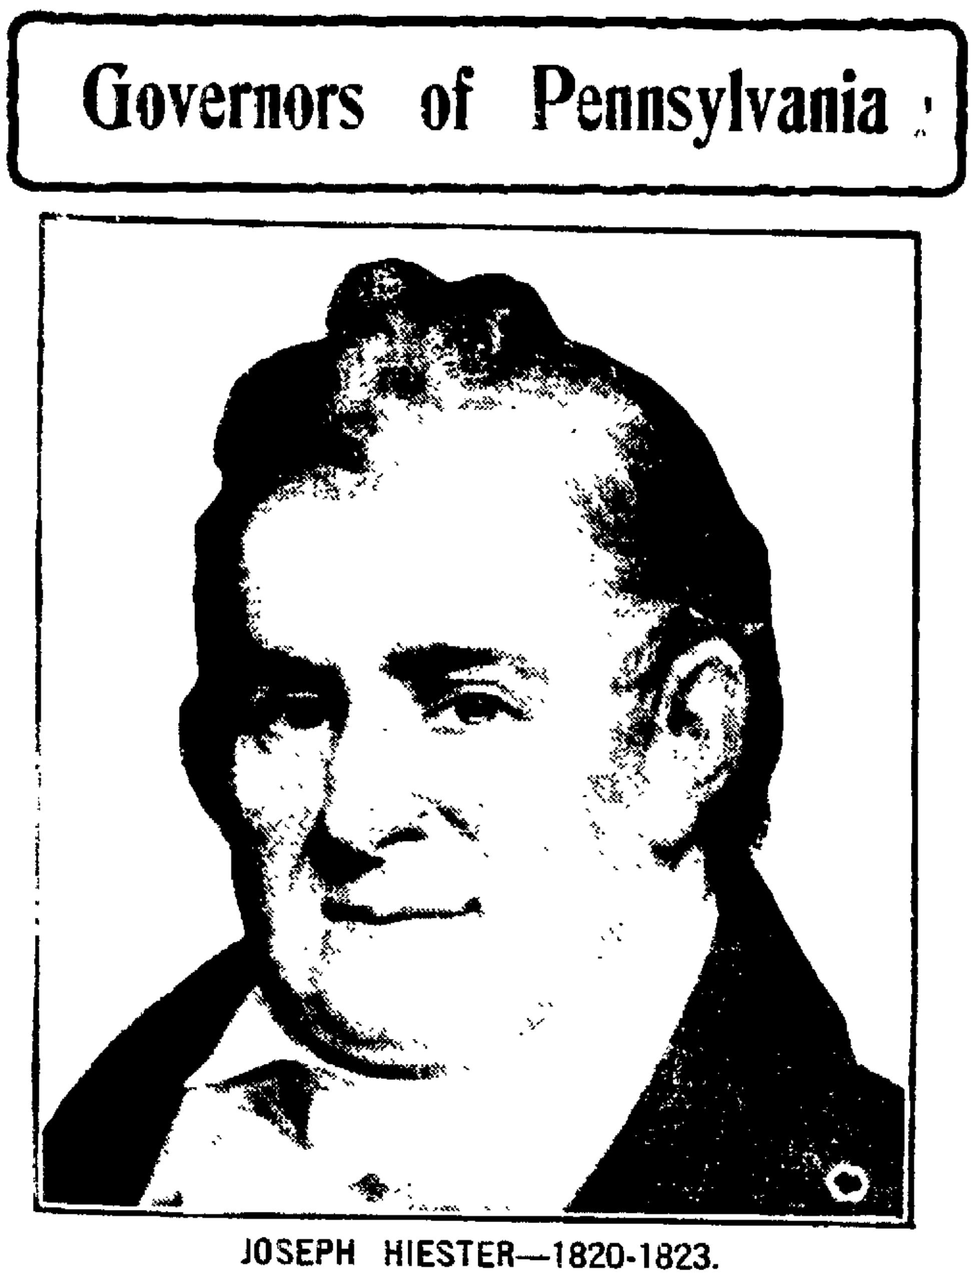
Governors of Pennsylvania



JOSEPH HIESTER—1820-1823.

His early years passed in hardship and toil. Joseph Hiester came to the front and gained much favorable prominence as a Revolutionary soldier. Upon returning to civil life he was, in 1787, elected a member of the convention for the ratification of the constitution of the United States. In 1789 he was elected a member of the state constitutional convention. The old school Republican party, with the assistance of the Federalists, elected him governor of the commonwealth in 1821. His valuable services as a member of the legislature and later as a member of congress were leading factors in his successful campaign for governor. During his administration as governor the new capitol at Harrisburg was occupied for the first time. Upon the expiration of his gubernatorial term he retired to private life. He died at Reading, his birthplace, June 10, 1832. His term of governor extended from Dec. 19, 1820, to Dec. 16, 1823.

DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION

FOR THE STATE WILL MEET AT HARRISBURG, AUG. 4.

State Chairman Hon. Arthur G. Dewalt Re-elected for Ensuing Year.

Harrisburg, August 4, the place and time for holding the next Democratic State Convention

Hon. Arthur G. Dewalt of Lehigh, re-elected chairman of the State Democratic Committee

Samuel Kunkle, Esq., banker, of Harrisburg, elected treasurer of the State Democratic Committee.

The next Democratic State convention will be held in Harrisburg on August 4 to nominate candidates for Supreme Court Judge, Auditor General and State Treasurer

This was the work of the Executive Committee of the Democratic State Committee on last Wednesday and was afterward ratified by the State Committee in session at Harrisburg

It was a larger gathering of representative Democrats than was expected in mid-summer in what is usually called an off year. It was attended by S. Miley Miller, County Chairman of Adams county and thereby member of the Democratic State Committee.

On Wednesday morning the county chairmen from the various divisions, met and elected division chairmen to serve for the ensuing year. Adams county belongs to the First Division, composed of the counties of Adams, Cumberland, Dauphin, Franklin, Juniata, Lebanon, Mifflin, Perry and York, and elected William K. Myers, Esq., of Harrisburg, as division chairman, taking the place of Dr. J. C. Amig of Lewistown.

The division chairmen and state officers composing the executive committee, next met and selected Harrisburg as the place and August 4 as the time for holding the next State Committee.

In the afternoon the State Committee, composed of all the county chairmen in the State met, being called to order by State Chairman Dewalt.

Chairman Dewalt stated that the object of the meeting was the election of a State chairman and treasurer for the State committee, and ordered a call of the roll which disclosed the fact that very few counties were not represented, and those were far remote from the capital

William J. Brennan of Allegheny, presented the name of Hon. Arthur G. Dewalt, of Lehigh, for State chairman. He said Mr. Dewalt is a gentleman who has served with satisfaction and was noted for promoting the best interests of the party. He is able, experienced and competent. The coming campaign requires intelligent service such as was being given by Senator Dewalt and the speaker had great pleasure in presenting the name of Hon. Arthur G. Dewalt. Loud applause greeted Senator Dewalt's name and he was elected by acclamation. Mr. Brennan making the motion.

Chairman Dewalt made a brief speech of acceptance, returning his thanks and asking the assistance of every worker in the party. "I recognize the responsibility of this position," said the speaker, "but whatever I can do to further the interests of the Democratic party and bring a victory is at your service

"There seems to be an idea that this is an 'off year.' That is a mistake. There never is an 'off year.' Every year we must stand up and fight for Democratic principles. But the chairman cannot fight alone. He must have the help of the leaders, he must have the help of the rank and file, and we must imbue the people with that idea. Help must come from the county chairmen. Each one owes a duty to the State chairman, that he must use every effort to get the voters out and be on the aggressive. The offices to be voted for this year are some of the most important in the gift of the people."

The speaker then defined the duties of the Judge of the Supreme Court, State Treasurer and Auditor General, saying that the latter official held the most powerful political position in the State. These offices, he said, are more important than that of the Governor. "We will nominate a candidate for Judge of the Supreme Court this year," he said, "with some hope and show of election. See that every Democrat gets to the polls and supports Democratic principles. We want an honest and economical administration of affairs in this State. (Applause.)

He spoke of the good material from which to select a ticket, mentioning no names, however, and pleaded that good men be selected as delegates to the State Convention, who will select the best candidates and place them on a good platform. "There may not be enough Democrats in Pennsylvania to elect the ticket," he said; "but there are enough independent voters who will gladly aid in the election of a good ticket. The present Republican ticket is machine made, and it was received with ominous silence. If we give the people what they want, there will be enough independent voters to assist in electing our ticket." More applause greeted the eloquent chairman's prediction.

George W. A. MacDonald named Samuel Kunkle of Harrisburg for treasurer of the committee, when it was explained that Mr. Kunkel has been a lifelong Democrat and prominent as a banker. He was elected by acclamation, and that finished the work of the committee, which adjourned to meet August 3.

The delegates of Adams county to the next State convention at Harrisburg on August 4 are John C. Bollinger of Union township, U. H. Cromer of Hamiltonban township, S. Mac Eicholtz of Menallen township, and John A. Stambaugh of Berwick township

HOW LIGHTNING IS SPLIT UP

Why Barns Burn When Struck and Houses do Not.

Dr. M. A. Veeder, the scientist, in a recent address before a farmers' grange, explained his theory why fewer dwelling houses than barns burn whe nstruck by lightning.

It is said that the old style frame dwelling wherein the timbers were put together with wooden pins were frequently burned from lightning, whereas dwellings lathed and plastered and put together with nails were generally immune from fire when struck.

Another interesting fact was that the old fashioned barns with strips nailed up and down or battened were rarely or never burned, while the old style barns with siding nailed to joists were burned frequently by lightning. All this seems to indicate that the fire hazard from lightning decreased as the use of nails in construction increased both in dwellings and barns

Dr. Veeder spent a long time gathering statistics as to the construction of barns struck and destroyed by lightning and the address to the members of the grange is the result. Dr. Veeder said

"Barns are commonly burned by lightning; dwelling houses are not. In order to get at the true explanation of the difference between dwellings and barns in this regard it is necessary to consider the manner in which electricity sets fire.

"When flowing through a good conducting substance the electric current passes quietly, having little perceptible effect of any sort. If, however, it meets with resistance, and the current is sufficiently strong, it generates heat and great disruptive force, tearing everything to pieces and setting fire as in the case of lightning stroke. The problem is to lower the strength of the current and at the same time decrease the resistance. In the case of the atmospheric electricity this can be done by use of metal points

"The air itself is not a conductor of electricity, but the moisture and dust it contains are capable of carrying considerable quantities of electricity in the vicinity of points. By multiplying the number of points it is possible to break up a very powerful current into a multitude of smaller currents incapable of doing serious harm

"In this very room in which this address is being delivered there are in the side walls, ceilings, partitions and floors no less than upward of 30,000 metal points. The dwelling house which I myself occupy as a residence has in it, as nearly as can be calculated, 275,000 metal points. By far the larger number of these points are lath nails, which are not found at all in barns as ordinarily constructed.

"Even though imbedded in a slight coating of plaster or wood, 275,000 metal points in an ordinary house would split up even a very powerful lightning flash into tens of thousands of minute currents that would be harmless. More than this, such a concatenation of metallic points from roof to celling would be at work lowering the tension, decreasing it materially in advance of the stroke. Thus we have both lessening of the strength of the current and decreasing the resistance of the current at work on a very large scale in the case of dwelling houses as ordinarily constructed.

"On the other hand, in the case of barns the ordinary construction increases the danger of fire from lightning. The metal points in their cases are very much fewer in number and further apart, so that the electric current is compelled to make longer leaps and encounter greater resistance, which are the precise conditions that increase the danger of fire from lightning.

"It is obvious that if this is a correct statement of the case the remedy is within the reach of every one at a very small expense and effectually. With the evidence now at hand it would be best to imitate in barns the distribution of metal points ordinarily employed in lathing houses.

"This may be done very perfectly by putting rows of lath nails, about fifty in number, that is about an inch apart, for each lath. The best way is to start the nails into the lath on the barn floor, and they may be readily driven home when the lath has been adjusted to the place it is to occupy along the rafters, floor and upright timbers or on the siding of the barn between joists. It will be noted that the nails thus applied inside the building remain clean and bright, which may be a point of some importance. It may also be of service to employ the headless nails or brads.

"Localities where the metal points should be specially numerous are the cupola and the corners where currents tend to converge. In the original construction of a barn many forms of arrangement that are likely to be advantageous will suggest themselves.

"In the case of lightning rods it has been found that there is a surging to and fro of the current which tends to defeat the object sought to be obtained in their construction. It would seem that such to and fro movement could not occur where the lightning flash is split up into thousands of minute fragments through the agency of metal points, thus increasing the security in another way.

"The more widely and evenly the nails are distributed throughout the building from cellar to roof the better. They should be so arranged in lines as not to compel any long leaps, each point having a neighbor not more than an inch away. In other words they should be wrapped around the building in long lines, thus enclosing it after the manner of what is known as the electrical cage, objects within which, even the most delicate electrical appliances, are protected absolutely from interference of electrical currents from without. It is very likely that the lines of metal points which happen to extend in a vertical direction and which reach the ground will afford the greatest protection."

THE STANDARD OF THE WORLD

Pennsylvania Out of Debt.

Pennsylvania is exceptional to every other state in the Union that it is practically without debt. According to the recent statement made by the State authorities, the debt is $2,684,617.02 and to meet this there is in the sinking fund $2,666,379.51. This would make the net State debt $18,237.51 and with the current six months interest on funds in State depositories there will be realized enough to square the debt. Nov. 1, the sinking fund will be greater than the debt practically wiping it out. Practically it is said because the bond will not be due until 1912 and not until then can the sinking fund be used to liquidate the debt. It is likely that the State will never be actually out of debt as the indications that about $150,000 of debt will never be claimed, greater part of it under an Act of 1841 and has never been claimed and is not bearing interest. Yet State will have to keep an amount in sinking fund sufficient to pay the same wherever called upon. The debt which the State has every reason to expect to pay amounts to $16,000 less than the sinking fund now holds.

Three Hungarian Robbers.

Three Hungarians are in jail and will face the serious charge of robbery at the August court. Their victim was one of their own countrymen who has been at work at the flint mill at Bendersville Station. He was attacked last Thursday night while asleep and the savings of several years amounting to more than $200 were taken from him. A boy who came upon the gang at their work. it is said, was threatened to keep still or he would be killed. One of the robbers remained in the neighborhood and was apprehended on Saturday and placed in jail that evening by Constable Mummert of Bendersville. He is said to have been the leader and o have planned the deed. No money was found on him. The two others came to Gettysburg Friday night and bought tickets to New York City on Saturday morning. Word reaching here of the robbery and Mr. John A. Cox obtaining the number of their tickets. the authorities at Lancaster were telegraphed to arrest holders of tickets. Constable Mummert on Monday evening brought from Lancaster the two men found on the train.

Presbyterian Pen-Mar Program.

For the Presbyterian Pen-Mar Reunion tomorrow, Thursday, July 29, an elaborate program has been arranged.

A concert and college hour in the auditorium will follow the exercises, at which there will be ten-minute addresses by representatives of the Presbyterian colleges in this region.

Big Lutheran Reunion.

Fifteen thousand people attended the Lutheran reunion at Pen-Mar on last Thursday. Steam reailroads and trolley lines were kept very busy all day. Many of the most eminent men of the church were present. The exercises at the park included a concert by the Pen-Mar Orchestra, addresses by a number of ministers, a college hour,

The Rev. C. S. Trump of Martinsburg, W. Va., spoke on "Our Great Lutheran Church." The Rev. L. C. Manges of Harrisburg, spoke on "Our Lutheran Church at Work in America."

The Rev. J. A. Clutz, D.D., of this place, made an earnest plea for more young men for the ministry. He said that in going over the statistics of twenty synods he found that eighty-five churches were without ministers. He attacked the argument that ministers were not well supported, and that for this reason not many "best men" were in the ministry. He said there were as many "best men" in the ministry as in any other profession.

FARMER AND WHEAT CROP

INDICATIONS ARE PRICES FOR NEW CROP WILL KEEP UP

What Good Prices Mean to Farmer And The Whole Community

One day last week the Baltimore Sun contained the following interesting editorial on the farmer and wheat crop. Receipts of new Southern wheat Sat. July 17, 16,948 bushels; same day last year, 27,411 bushels. Receipts so far this season, 363,740 bushels; same time last year, 842,223 bushels. Extreme range of prices Saturday, $1.01a1.21; same pay last year, 84a96 cents.

This is a brief official statement furnished to the members of the Baltimore Chamber of Commerce. It is seemingly insignificant, but it is of far-reaching importance to the growers of wheat and to the consumers of bread. When it is considered that wheat in the nearby territory has now been harvested and that this is the period when it usually finds its way to the trading centers, the range of prices deserves more than passing notice. The prices received last year were regarded as satisfactory by most farmers, because in the early movement of the crop values generally touch their lowest ebb. This year the price levels are from 16 cents to 25 cents a bushel higher than a year ago, and are on a basis not exceeded in this market for about 20 years. The price range is governed solely by the quality of the wheat offering. At 25 a bushel advance it means that the farmer who has raised 20 bushels of good wheat to the acre gets $5 more profit from an acre than in 1908. On 100 acres this means $500 and on 200 acres—not an unusual sowing by the tidewater Maryland and Virginia wheat farmers—it means an increased income to him of $1,000 on this crop alone.

Assuming that it cost 70 cents to raise a bushel of wheat—and this is regarded as a fair estimate—for each 1,000 bushels of high-grade wheat grown the farmer pays $700, including the harvesting and transportation charges. On the market today he will get for this $1,250, or a net gain of $550. For the purpose of calculation the cost of production is estimated, but it has generally been accepted that the first cost to the farmer of raising a bushel of wheat is between 60 and 70 cents. All above is profit. The increased cost of labor and the enhanced value of the land in recent years may have somewhat increased this cost. None will deny that at $1 a bushel or above, wheat is a profitable crop. This is what the farmer is now receiving.

It is true the quantity of wheat coming to market is less than a year ago, the local receipts then being more than double those now coming in. The difference in supplies would naturally have some effect on prices, but it is not believed that it altogether occasions the wide difference prevailing this year over last. That the wheat crop in this section is short is acknowledged, but it is not admitted there is less than half a crop. Early in the harvesting period it was thought the yield would be two-thirds of an average. At present prices and with the present yield the farmer whose wheat grades No. 2 red, the high standard, will have a snug sum to add to his bank account when the check is returned from his selling agent.

There is another side to this prosperity picture. While the farmer derives his profit the bread consumer helps to pay the bill. High wheat prices mean higher cost for flour, and this is paid by all—from the wealthiest individual to the poorest laborer who ekes out his living by constant struggle and economy. This is a sad side, but as the farmer is enabled to spend freely, he, perhaps, makes it possible for greater employment at satisfactory pay for those who are not so fortunate in their sphere of life as he is in his.

GUY SMITH, a cutter in the Livingston Shoe Factory of New Oxford, cut an ugly gash in his left arm near the wrist, severing an artery.

THERE is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Sees Mother Grow Young

"It would be hard to overstate the wonderful change in my mother since she began to use Electric Bitters," writes Mrs. W. L. Gilpatrick of Danforth, Me. "Although past 70 she seems really to be growing young again. She suffered untold misery from dyspepsia for 20 years. At last she could neither eat, drink nor sleep. Doctors gave her up and all remedies failed, till Electric Bitters worked such wonders for her health." They invigorate all vital organs, cure Liver and Kidney troubles, induce sleep, impart strength and appetite. Only 50c at Peoples Drug Store.

THE U. S. GOVERNMENT in its "Pure Food Law" does not "indorse" or "guarantee" any preparation, as some manufacturers in their advertisements would make it appear. In the case of medicines the law provides that certain drugs shall be mentioned on the labels, if they are ingredients of the preparations. Ely's Cream Balm, the well-known family remedy for cold in the head, hay fever and nasal catarrh, doesn't contain a single injurious drug, so the makers have simply to print the fact that it complies fully with all the requirements of the law.

Farmers Fear Moth Pest.

the laws to this end enacted, and every possible means used to attract birds and thus increase their number to combat the insect crop pests. Every state, county and town where proper protection of the insect-eating birds has not been provided or whose bird laws are not enforced, will fall an easy prey to the costly ravages of the spreading moths it is shown. Failure to take up an active campaign such as is proposed can only be undone in the face of the moth plague by years of hard labor and millions of dollars of the tax-payers money, it has been proved by the government and state authorities.

The Empire State is today massing a great force of experts near Port Chester, where these insect pests have just crossed the border line on their way West. If this advancing column is not checked, it will cost the people many millions of dollars in the near future to make up for the depletion of its wild birds, due to years of lax laws, it is estimated. In other states in the path of this pest, where little legislation exists to prevent the slaughter of the insect eaters, campaigns are already on foot to rouse the people to the seriousness of the situation. For years the millinery interests have prevented the farmers from securing real bird protection in New York state, it is pointed out, and now the whole commonwealth must pay the penalty.

Wild birds can be attracted by erecting suitable bird houses and in this way increasing the number of birds in a given locality. Birds will be found a far more effective remedy to prevent the increase of these two insect pests than any other means that can be employed. The late Baron von Berlepsch, on his estate of 500 acres at Seebach, in the District of Laugensalza, in Thuringia, experimented along these lines for thirty years with the most phenominal success. A history of this experiment was published in German. It has been translated into English, and may be obtained for a few cents from this association. The fecunity of the gypsy and brown-tail moth is wonderful, and therefore every possible effort should be made to stamp out every colony of them that is discovered in this State or any other part of the United States before these pests can spread."

A BURNT BARRIER.

The Lover Laid His Pride at His Sweetheart's Feet.

By MARIE MONTROSE.

[Copyrighted, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.]

Down the dust white country road sped Doxy palpitating and panic stricken, her eyes bent on a volume of smoke that was rolling up from the sheep dotted pasture. She went "cross lots" and came to the charred remains of the old farmhouse, where a knot of neighbors, helpless and wondering, gathered round the pathetically small pile of rescued household effects.

Doxy was not a young woman, but she was of the type that time touched gently. Her eyes were soft and gray and expressive of a past but unforgotten time. Her optimistic fatalism was not wanting in this hour of trouble.

"I don't see how you managed to save so many things," she said to her friends, each of whom at this encouragement began to point out what he had snatched from the flames.

"See, Miss Barton," cried a lad, triumphantly thrusting a tin can into her hand, "I hearn you say as how this 'ere was yer bank, so I grabbed it fust thing."

"Oh, Jim, there is $50 in it!"

Her father, Seth Barton, now arrived upon the scene. His heart was full of memories which were smothered in the philosophical remark, "Never could have saved her in this wind!"

"You and Doxy 'll come right home with us and stay," cordially invited the nearest neighbor.

The others followed suit in this proffer of hospitality, tendering wide open doors.

"You are so kind, but we'll stay right here," said Doxy in response to each invitation. "Our upstairs is fitted up snug as a fireside, you know."

Her father's stoical face brightened. He had a catlike clinging to home—not from love of every heart beat for it, as in Doxy's case, but because he could not bear the thought of uprooting and transplanting.

The neighbors carried the goods and chattels to the barn and helped Doxy arrange a temporary home. While the men were aiding in the evening work their wives prepared supper. Any event, joyful or calamitous, in the district was deemed an "occasion" worthy of a general repast. After supper they departed for their homes. Seth settled down to his evening pipe and weekly paper as if nothing had happened.

Then Doxy in the soft shadows of the dusk stole out and went through the garden to the blackened ruins of tottering walls and crumbled mortar. All the voices of long ago called to her, most persistently the voice of the youth who ten years before had wooed her.

There had been the lovers' quarrel, and Jed Knox in a moment of hot headed anger had sworn he would never again cross the Barton threshold.

Time and events showed him that he was entirely in the wrong and that the quarrel had been of his own making, but he held stubbornly to his oath. With quiet and firm dignity Doxy had refused to see him elsewhere than in her own home.

As Jed's stubbornness increased he grew bitter and morose, avoiding all mention of Doxy.

She started at sight of a man coming from out the ruins, but in an instant she recognized Sol Opper, the village carpenter, early in line for a contract.

"Sol," said Doxy briskly, "I want you to build me a house as near like this as you can."

"Waal, Miss Barton, tell me how much you can put into a house."

"There's the $50 Jim saved, the bank account, a little insurance, some that Hobbs owes us"—

After a mental accounting she gave the total of her capital. Sol shook his head discouragingly.

"You can't do it noways for that money."

"Knock out the cellar," commanded Doxy, "and take off the blinds. In the fall I will use the turkeys for blinds."

"The turkeys!" repeated Sol wonderingly.

"The money I get for selling them, I mean."

When the blinds were off, the bay window deducted, the gables torn off, the back porch taken away, the stairs removed and a general clearing of fireplace, attic, paint, plaster, lath and partitions had been effected, the amount of cash available was triumphantly reached.

The architecture appealed to Sol as easy to build, but was not in accordance with his ideas of what a dwelling should be.

"Your house won't have no insides, Miss Barton, but I'll be on hand tomorrow to begin," said he disapprovingly.

When he had gone she again resumed her twilight reveries.

"Miss Doxy!"

She started and, turning, saw the figure of a lad so like the youth of the long ago that there was a momentary stirring in her heart like pain.

"Don't you remember me? Laurie Knox?"

He was Jed's young nephew, who had been used as a child to spend his summer vacations with his uncle.

"Little Laurie! A man!"

"I hope so," he replied, taking her hand. "I came today for a visit after all these years. We just heard of the fire, and Uncle Jed asked me to come and see you and ask if there was anything we could do to help you. Won't you and your father come over to Uncle Jed's and stay, just for night anyway?"

[illegible] so [illegible], then, his struggles [illegible] her [illegible] come himself [illegible]. She thanked the boy kindly, but declined the invitation. After taking a few moments of old times she bade him go to the barn and see her father.

"You had better come, too," he pleaded. "I don't believe it's just good for you to stay here."

She smiled at his boyish wisdom.

"Just a few moments more, Laurie, and then I'll join you and father."

It was very quiet. A lone bird called. She felt solitary and outlawed. A third time she was interrupted. There was no mistaking the man. Jed, strong and straight, his grimness softened, but showing in the lines of his face, came straight up to her.

"Doxy, I thought they would never go. As soon as I sent the lad I knew I must come myself. I took a short cut, but the Opper man was ahead of me and then Laurie."

"Well?"

Her voice was curiously subdued.

"Doxy, I am here at last. I have punished myself all these years, which have not meant much to you, for you are as young and as fair as the night"—

"The night you said you should never cross our threshold."

"Doxy," he cried, seizing her hand passionately, "I have suffered for it. Be good to me."

"Why did you come tonight, Jed?" she asked quietly, but with beating heart.

"Why? Because everything brought me. I couldn't keep away."

"You came," she said, turning proudly away, "because you knew that at last you could come and still keep your oath, because you knew the house was gone."

"No," he said, with a long breath. "You don't mean that, and you don't think so."

She felt his strong arms about her. She was lifted and carried over the smoking ashes and bricks to the place where the doorstep had been. He held her closely with his left arm, while his right hand grasped a blackened beam. In a moment he was standing on the charred threshold, pressing her to him in a tight embrace.

"Here," he said with forced lightness, "I lay my pride at your feet. Now, Doxy, won't you say something?"

"Never mind the ten years now, Jed. They are gone—like the house."

"But we'll have a new house, Doxy, right here, and Sol shall put on and in all those things you told him to leave off."

"I say," cried the voice of Laurie from a distance, "Uncle Seth just found a ten dollar bill in the old dictionary. He says he'll bet it's the one he lost ten years ago."

A Case For Condolence.

Not all that glitters is gold and not all who lean over the rail are seasick. One of the lessons of life is not to take too much for granted. However, in the instance mentioned by F. J. M. Smith in "The Hades of Ardenne" the sympathy was as genuine as if the object had been more deserving.

Night was falling as Daubiton paced the deck. One by one the passengers had gone below. One lady remained in the stern, leaning over the rail, gazing sadly over the sea. Daubiton could just make out her outlines in the dusk.

As he drew near her on one of his rounds a heartrending groan startled his ears. He looked wistfully at the graceful figure shrouded in its long garment. He could make out the small head bent over the foaming water in exquisite feminine grace. If he could only help her!

Back and forth he paced. She was evidently suffering from the worst form of seasickness. It was sad to think of her all alone with no one to comfort her. Daubiton debated. Perhaps she preferred to be left alone.

The boat suddenly gave a roll and plunged wildly. There was a shrill shriek, followed by a terrible groan. Daubiton could stand it no longer. He went to her and spoke respectfully. "Can I do anything for you?"

There was no answer.

"She seems unconscious," he said to himself and laid his hand gently on her shoulder. Then he started. It was no lady. It was a fender, and the groans were made by the chains which led from the rudder to the steering house.

Mother Love Defined.

What is material instinct? Is it a tangible something or is it love, the desire to protect? This wonderful mother love—what would it not do? Suns rise and set just for baby. Conversation on other subjects is tabooed in the house where a new monarch reigns. The four walls of the home are suddenly glorified with the presence of the little newcomer; the ambition of both father and mother reaches its zenith. Pleasurable pastimes we were wont to indulge in are forgotten; pursuits that filled our life, music, art, literature, things that were part of us, associated with our very name—where have they gone? All laid aside as of no moment now; in the future perhaps when "baby" is not so dependent on our every thought we will again feel their charm. Just now they might as well never have been, so completely do we give ourselves to this new life.

This is maternal instinct.—Mrs. Arnold in Uncle Sam's Magazine.

Moral Support.

"You think well of Miss Scadds?"
"Well, I'm conspiring to marry her."
"It takes two to make a conspiracy."
"I have help."
"Her mother?"
"No, herself."

British Savings Clubs.

The working people of England are great patrons of savings clubs, all sorts of agencies being created to enable them to save money that they may have it to spend during the festive season of the year. There are clubs of all kinds, ranging from the shop club, to which the workingmen contribute, to the little clubs run for the purpose of letting school children have a shilling's worth of sweets for a Christmas treat. There is hardly a workshop of any importance in London without its workmen's saving club, besides which there are many dividing clubs carried on at public houses, and the deposits amount in the aggregate to a very large sum. The withdrawals begin in the early days of December, and it is not uncommon for the banks to pay out £300 ($1,460) to £500 ($2,433) to a single club, and the problem of storing the money is one of some difficulty. As the amounts have to be divided among many people they are wanted in cash, and in some cases the proportion of gold, silver and copper is specified.

Easter Island.

Easter island is a lonely Pacific islet, forty-seven square miles in area, entirely volcanic and containing several extinct craters, some of which are more than a hundred feet high, discovered by Roggeveen on Easter Sunday, 1722. Little is known concerning the curious remains which have made the island famous. They consist of more than 500 rudely carved stone statues and busts, varying in height from three to seventy feet and said to be portraits of famous men, not idols. There are also hundreds of stone houses on the island, with painted interiors and incised tablets which, strange to say, have never been deciphered. Between 1860 and 1862 the population, by reason of polyandry and emigration, dwindled to 150 souls, and in 1863 most of these were carried off by the Peruvians to work guano. The few inhabitants left are fair haired Polynesians. Since 1888 the island has been a Chilean convict station.—New York Telegram.

Then and Now.

Act I.

Tilkins—How is business, Wilkins?

Wilkins—Can't make it go. At this rate I shall be bankrupt in another month. I don't seem to have any head for business.

Tilkins—No; you haven't. But you have a good start, and if you'll promise to let me run things I'll go in with you as partner.

Wilkins—Done. A friend in need is a friend indeed.

Act II.—Ten Years Later.

Guest—What a magnificent place you have—everything that wealth could buy or heart long for! You have been wonderfully prosperous, Mr. Wilkins.

Mr. Wilkins (sadly)—True, but, after all, I get only half the profits of my great establishment. I tell you, my friend, the mistake of my life was taking a partner.—London Scraps.

Fear of Premature Burial.

The fear of premature burial, which prompted the late Lord Burton to direct by his will that his heart should be removed from his body, has caused many well known men and women to order a surgical operation to be performed upon their bodies. Harriet Martineau left her doctor £10 to amputate her head, and Lady Burton directed that her heart should be pierced with a needle. The late Edmund Yates left instructions that his jugular vein should be severed, with a provision that a fee of 20 guineas should be paid for the purpose. Literary persons appear to have been particularly afraid of premature burial. Bishop Berkeley, Lord Lytton, Hans Andersen and Wilkie Collins all took measures to protect themselves from it.—Westminster Gazette.

Locations of Promotion.

Elzena, aged four, reveled in kindergarten lore and each day imparted to her young mother the many interesting things that the sweet faced teacher had told them. Among the vicissitudes of school life to be encountered was that of vaccination, which was new to the little one. After much explaining and reassuring this difficulty was safely passed. A few weeks later she returned one day from kindergarten in a whirl of excitement, exclaiming: "Mother, mother, I'm going to be promoted! Mother, will I be promoted on my arm or my leg?"—New York Times.

German Way of Serving Asparagus.

When living in Germany we noticed that the asparagus served there was unusually tender and of a much more delicate flavor than that which we got in America. We learned that the Germans do not consider asparagus fit to eat unless the outside skin is scraped from each stalk before cooking. This sounds like slow work, but if a sharp knife is used it can be done quite rapidly and is well worth the trouble.—Good Housekeeping.

Told You So.

"It's the unexpected that always happens."

"Oh, I don't know. Somebody always claims to have predicted it."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

The Poor Doctor.

Hawkins—So you sent for a doctor? Does he think you will be out soon?

Robbins—I imagine so. He said he wished I had sent for him sooner.—Puck.

Silence is too much praised. Nine men out of ten will shun you if you can't or won't talk.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.
